

A large, stylized, light blue graphic of a person's profile, facing right, set against a dark teal background. The profile is composed of smooth, curved shapes, with a circular element representing the eye and a pointed shape for the nose and mouth.

Taylor (Alexander) Aiello

Associate | New York

Practice Areas

Antitrust

Contact

T: 212.261.5653

taiello@axinn.com

↓ Download V-Card

Taylor (Alexander) Aiello is an associate in Axinn's antitrust group. She leverages her government and private practice experience to advise clients on complex antitrust matters, including merger review, government investigations, and competition litigation.

Taylor represents clients across a range of industries in antitrust and competition matters, with a focus on merger control and regulatory advocacy before the Department of Justice and Federal Trade Commission (FTC). She counsels clients on transaction-related risks, Hart-Scott-Rodino (HSR) filings, and all aspects of Second Request compliance.

Prior to entering private practice, Taylor served as an attorney in the FTC's Bureau of Competition, where she assessed merger filings across industries, including energy, chemicals, and technology.

Taylor received her JD from George Mason University's Antonin Scalia Law School and her BA in International Studies from American University.

Not yet admitted to practice in New York*

Education

- JD, cum laude – The Antonin Scalia Law School at George Mason University (2019)
- BA, International Studies, cum laude – American University, School of International Service (2016)

Admissions

- District of Columbia

Quotes

“Clients say Axinn provides ‘excellent availability, a minimum of bluster and pragmatic solutions to thorny legal and business issues.’”

— Chambers USA