Larry Gomez has extensive experience at the intersection of law and technology, supporting complex litigation through all phases of the eDiscovery process. With a background spanning legal technology, document review management, and workflow design, he focuses on developing practical, defensible solutions using advanced analytics and emerging technologies.

Prior to joining Axinn, Larry worked with law firms and corporate clients on eDiscovery strategy and related issues, including investigations and information governance, coordinating cross-functional teams and supporting large-scale matters. Earlier in his career, he practiced at a law firm where he managed attorney review teams and developed protocols for complex litigation matters.

Larry earned his JD, cum laude, from Vermont Law School and holds a BA in Philosophy from George Mason University. He is admitted to practice in Virginia and Washington, DC.
