Jeny Maier is Axinn's managing partner and a trusted advisor for Fortune 500 companies navigating the complexities of antitrust law in high-profile, multibillion-dollar deals. With two decades of experience, Jeny stands out for her strategic approach and profound knowledge, earning recognition from Chambers USA and The Legal 500 U.S. as a leading figure in antitrust and competition law.

In her practice, Jeny guides clients throughout the complete life cycle of transactions, from risk analysis and due diligence to pre merger notifications and merger agreement negotiations through antitrust agency review, investigations, and remedies.

Jeny leverages her background in economics to strategically assess commercial negotiations, regulatory risks, and advocacy opportunities related to high-profile deals. She represents clients across industries, including the healthcare, pharmaceuticals, technology, and manufacturing sectors. Her experience includes advising Sunrun – a major provider of residential solar, battery storage, and energy services – on its transformational $3.2 billion acquisition of Vivint Solar, as well as advising McKesson on its completed $2.49 billion acquisition of a controlling interest in Florida Cancer Specialists' Core Ventures.

Beyond deal-making, Jeny has considerable experience representing clients in civil and criminal antitrust investigations and related class action litigation. She also advises clients on antitrust issues relating to pricing practices, distribution and marketing arrangements, intellectual property license agreements, and standard-setting activities.

As managing partner at Axinn, Jeny leverages her strong business acumen to drive strategy and implement Firm-wide initiatives. Before joining Axinn's Executive Committee in 2022, she held leadership roles within the Firm's antitrust group and led the Women's Affinity Group. Jeny also contributes to the broader legal community as vice chair of the American Bar Association Antitrust Law Section's Serial Podcast Committee.

Prior to joining Axinn, Jeny was a senior associate in the antitrust practice of a global law firm. During her time at The George Washington University Law School, she interned with the Federal Trade Commission's Bureau of Competition and the U.S. Department of Justice Antitrust Division's National Criminal Enforcement Section.
